

The Field. 5.9.1957.

A request to deer-stalkers.—I am anxious to acquire lice from the red deer, as we have none in the collections here. They may be found near the skin, but as the body of the deer cools they may move to the surface of the hair. Any specimens in 70 per cent. or 80 per cent. alcohol or dry in slips of paper will be gratefully received here.—THERESA CLAY, British Museum (Natural History), Cromwell Road, London, S.W.7.
